Fall 2009 Graduate Course: Current Issues in Special Education with Edward Carter
CRN 12353 SPED 9400 3 cr.

On-line course begins September 8, 2009

Students consider the context for special education and examine current and controversial issues such as inclusion, cost-effectiveness, educational reform and grading. The course format gives students the opportunity to examine and debate these issues from multiple perspectives. Particular attention is given to the ways in which current issues and controversies affect classroom teachers and their students.
